Americans have tossed TV Guide on their coffee tables for 53 years, and now they can plaster it on their walls. But be warned: They're not real covers.

The new wall border of 20 "covers" re-creates the magazine's historic — and smaller — signature look, with models depicting stars of genres such as Westerns, doctor shows, cop shows and so on.

The wallpaper ($14.95 for a 5-yard roll) sold out quickly at tvguidestore.com after it was advertised in a recent issue. It has since been restocked.

It's part of York Wallcoverings' new Retro-Metro collection, aimed at the consumer who's young, fashion-aware and "wants to achieve this ultra-trendy look," York's Amy Martin says.
